EDIT 26/11/2018:

- Am I affected?

If you are using anything crypto-currency related, then maybe. As discovered by @maths22, the target seems to have been identified as copay related libraries. It only executes successfully when a matching package is in use (assumed to be copay at this point). If you are using a crypto-currency related library and if you see `flatmap-stream@0.1.1` after running `npm ls event-stream flatmap-stream`, you are most likely affected. For example:

```
$ npm ls event-stream flatmap-stream
...
flatmap-stream@0.1.1
...
```

- What does it do?

Other users have done some good analysis of what these payloads actually do.

IF YOU WANT TO CONNECT to find at my personal site.

I have nearly twenty years of experience helping companies build amazing things online, as a software engineer, business analyst, and team director. I've worked with and for companies like Channel Nine, CommBank, Optus, Subaru, and Canva; most recently I acted as Director for YOW! Conferences and Workshops. My current role is Manager Solutions Architects at AWS.

I am a frequent speaker at tech events around Australia, including DDD Perth 2017, YOW! 2016 Conference, TEDx Melbourne 2016, and Web Directions Respond 2015. More details about my previous and upcoming speaking engagements can be found on <http://www.krishoward.org>.
